Pitching - definition of pitching by The Free Dictionary

A pitch is nothing more than a verbal presentation of a notion, concept, situation, idea, or story. It can be augmented with photographs, casting suggestions, newspaper articles, clippings, or anything else that will help you in the "selling" of your idea. When we talk about pitching, we're talking about the presentation of an idea. That means it's your responsibility to convince a production executive (s), or agent, or producer, whoever it might be, that your idea is so good, so ...

THE ART OF PITCHING - Syd Field

For a right-handed pitcher, throwing arm is right arm, a gloved hand is left, lead/stride leg is left lower extremity and pivot/stance leg is right. The phase of windup begins with the initiation of the stride leg and ends when the ball separates from the glove and the stride leg reaches the highest point.
